HEALTH HAZARD DATA

These products do contain microorganisms, which under certain conditions, could lead to an infectious process. It is anticipated that "technically qualified individuals" working in microbiology laboratories (those individuals who, because of professional or technical education, training or experience, understand the hazards prior to exposure) are aware of the potential hazards and deal with the hazards as integral part of their standard operational procedures. Manifestations resulting from exposure (i.e. inhalation or transdermal introduction) are variable.

If accidental exposure does occur, the best emergency or precautionary measures are to determine the identity of the microorganism and contact a physician for appropriate prophylactic therapy or prognostic monitoring.

Steps to be taken in case material is spilled or released: Notify ALL people working in the immediate area of the incident. Put on latex and/or latex free gloves. With tweezers, pick up as much material as possible and carefully place the materials into a biohazard container. Immediately, saturate the spill or leak with an aqueous germicidal solution. Keeping the spill area moist with the germicidal solution for the appropriate amount of time as indicated on the germicidal solution used. Wipe up the spill or leak and dispose into a biohazard container. Following cleanup, carefully remove the gloves and place into the biohazard container. Seal the biohazard container. Dispose of the biohazard container in compliance with regulatory requirements.

Waste Disposal Method: Precautions should be taken against microbial hazard. Sterilize or incinerate any materials that have been used during processing these materials.

SECTION VIII
SPECIAL PROTECTION
INFORMATION
